Indian Mountain State Park is a multi-use facility in Campbell County near Tennessee's northern border. In addition to providing camping and recreational opportunities, it serves as a living demonstration of how good environmental practices can reclaim wasteland and convert it for beneficial use.

Indian Mountain has a history and origin different from that of any other Tennessee State Park. The city of Jellico originally acquired the approximately 200-acre park in the late 1960's through a Federal Open Space Grant. The area had been used for strip mining.

The park was developed as a reclamation project in which abandoned strip mining pits were converted to recreational uses. The project was completed under the auspices of the Appalachian Regional Development Commission Act of 1966. This park demonstrates that beneficial use can be made of land after extensive damage such as that involved with surface mining.
